Hancock election official feels frustrated citizens may not vote

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

An official coordinating Hancock's first Democratic primary election involving new district and precinct boundaries expects the County Circuit Clerk's office will be deluged with telephone calls from voters confused about where they should vote.

In addition, voters confused about precinct or polling locations may not vote at all on Aug. 2, the official fears. Charles Gottschalk of Bay St. Louis, election coordinator and County Election Commission secretary, reported this week that based on the large number of notification postcards returned out of hundreds sent to registered voters in altered precincts, the clerk's office and the Democratic Executive Committee in charge of the Aug. 2 primary will receive numerous calls that day.

Gottschalk said he and Marsha Ashworth, both hired temporarily to notify voters and organize the upcoming election, have worked about three months on the project which was expected to be completed June 15.

But unexpected problems have complicated their effort which now should be finished just before the primary. He reported about 5,000 out of Hancock's 18,331 registered voters are being mailed postcards notifying them of precinct changes and the resulting new polling locations.

But the election coordinator said about half of the postcards are being returned by the Bay St. Louis Post Office due to address changes primarily in rural Hancock.

City council objects to new hospital plans

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Bay St. Louis City Council passed a resolution Tuesday night requesting the Hancock County Board of Supervisors to allow Hancock General Hospital to remain within Bay city limits.

The resolution states the mayor and city council feel since Bay St. Louis is the county seat, the hospital should remain within the city limits.

Presented by Mayor Larry Bennett and approved by a unanimous vote of the council, the resolution will be presented to the board of supervisors at its next meeting on July 28.

Bennett requested that the members of the council be present at the supervisors meeting when the resolution is presented.

Following the council meeting, Bennett said, "There are hospitals all over this state that are older than ours and filled to capacity."

Bennett continued saying, "Let the people voice their opinions on the issue. The people should tell the supervisors how they feel."

"If the hospital needs additional space why not use additional space from the county home and health department which would give them ample room," Bennett said.

"The city could expand the road from Highland to Felicity Streets and add another two lanes to make the hospital more accessible."

"We should go into a joint venture to put in proper culverts so that in bad weather, the hospital will be easily accessible."

Bennett said that he just can't see spending $10 million to build a new hospital to be paid for by revenue bonds which will be repaid by the hospital income. It will cost patients at the hospital and it will cost the taxpayer a great deal of money, Bennett said, that isn't necessary.

James Thriffley, council member, said, "We're talking about spending $10 million to expand a hospital by nine beds. I'd like to know what the financial plan is by the hospital."

"In order to pay back revenue bonds for $10 million the hospital would have to generate over a million a year. The present hospital hasn't been in the black yet," Thriffley said.

"I have also heard talk that the new hospital may not have maternity facilities because maternity is not a profitable portion," Thriffley added.

Thriffley said the question should be asked, "What profit has to be generated in order to repay the bonds?"

"I want to emphasize these are questions—when you talk about a project, however good it is—, that the public should be made aware of the liabilities associated with it from the financial point of view."

Thriffley added, "We should all be acquainted with the idea of what could possibly happen if the money was not available to repay the bonds. How would it effect the future bond rating of Hancock County and the cities of Waveland and Bay St. Louis?"

Thriffley also stated, "I think it's imperative that we have quality health care in the county, but I am skeptical about abandoning a facility and its adjoining property that has the potential to be expanded and improved for about 28 percent of the cost of the new facility."

"I can't understand why we need 21 acres for a facility which is supposed to require 7 to 10 acres. Where the hospital is now is about 11-plus acres."

"There is land in front of the hospital where the parking lot is that could house a building. The parking lot could be put in the back of the hospital."

The proposed location for the new hospital is on Nicholson Avenue between McLaurin Street and Old Spanish Trail.

The hospital would be financed with revenue bonds to be repaid by the hospital income.

He is now visiting his sister, Valerie Fisher, in Waveland. He noted the red and gold-trimmed 'state dress' uniform is decorated with the initials E.R. for Elizabeth Regina (Queen Elizabeth) and symbols representing the Rose of England, Thistle of Scotland and Shamrock of Ireland. There are only 38 men in this distinguished force.

Elite British force member visiting Waveland relative

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

One member of a small but elite traditional British guard force is visiting a relative in Waveland.

Peter Anthony Harding, 53, and his wife, Vera, both of Her Majesty's Tower of London, are visiting his sister, Valerie Fisher, owner of Exmouth Lodge on Waveland Avenue.

He is a yeoman warder, popularly known as a Beefeater, one of a 38-member force formed in 1443 and charged with protecting the priceless Crown Jewels of England and the tower where they are kept, conducting historical tours of the ancient 18-acre fortress, and 'sovereign escort' (official guards) of Queen Elizabeth.

In a recent interview, Harding showed photographs of himself on duty at the tower wearing the traditional red 'state dress' and Navy blue 'working dress.'

A tourist might regard the Beefeater as a frilly tour guide, but Harding and his 37 counterparts are all seasoned British military men prepared to handle any situation.

Harding explained that all yeoman warders must complete at least 22 years service in the English Air Force or Army, have received that country's Good Conduct Medal, possess an unblemished record for the last 18 years and attain the military rank of at least warrant officer—the highest British enlisted men's rank which is a regimental sergeant major.

The yeoman warder said he has served all over the world during his 34-year military career, attained the rank of regimental sergeant major and was in the British Special Forces.

While in the military—noting the Beefeater is a civil service position—Harding was a medic, sky diver and scuba diver.

Harding said he had planned to retire when he reached 55 years old, but a depressed English job market coupled with an opportunity to join the discovered the unauthorized expenditures when he checked the June bank statement. Haddock noticed a check written for $1,500, payable to cash, 'for three air conditioning units,' said Hancock County School Superintendent, Terrell Randolph.

Purchase of air conditioning units was not authorized by the club, nor were any units purchased, Haddock reported.

Further investigation revealed another unauthorized check for $300 drawn on the account, said Randolph.

"I filed the affidavit charging him," Randolph said.

Justice Court Judge, John Chevis, who issued the warrant, said, "I have also had to issue two other warrants for Valachi, one for driving on a suspended or revoked license and one for driving without an authorized inspection sticker."

Peterson said, "Our investigation is continuing."

"We will probably seize the records that are in his wife's possession."

However, Peterson said, Ann Valachi, secretary of the PTC, is not suspected of any wrongdoing.

Signatures required on the checks are of the president, Bonnie Allison and Valachi's. He is accused of signing his own name and forging that of Allison's on the checks, according to Peterson.

At recess meeting tonight

Hancock school board to review budget woes

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.

The Hancock County School Board will meet tonight with a state financial expert to review problems encountered by county employees in formulating the school district's 1983-84 budget.

A Monday night recess meeting of the board scheduled primarily to review the budget was abruptly halted by a unanimously approved motion offered by Tommy Shaw and seconded by Billie Fay Lyons, both board members.

Just after the board approved the minutes of a previous meeting, Shaw stated, "I move that this board do no other business until we receive a financial statement and a budget is ready to be presented to us."

The board later agreed to recess until 7 p.m. tonight.

Terrell Randolph, county superintendent of education, said he requested Smith Sparks, State Department of Education Division of Finance director, to attend the meeting tonight to speak with the board.

When Shaw was asked why he offered the motion, he replied, "Billie Fay (Lyons) and I met with Sparks and he said this office is in a mess. And I don't want any part of this anymore."

Randolph blamed the present financial problems on excessive expenditures during the last three years.

Shaw stated, "He (Sparks) didn't tell us that!"

Lyons explained that the recent payment of bills from the wrong district accounts brought about the present budget problems.

The superintendent admitted that mistakes were made which stemmed from a lack of surplus funds.

"We have a problem in meeting our budget needs for the next year. In the last three years this office has been in a hell of a mess," he reiterated.

Several months ago Randolph would not recommend the board rehire its head bookkeeper, Brenda Ladner, and following her employment several district central office personnel have resigned.

Randolph said the board would face either reducing the budget, finding new money sources or illegally 'going into the red.'

The board meets at the district central office in the Dan M. Russell Sr. Memorial Youth Court Center on Court Street in Bay St. Louis.

POST OFFICE POTPOURRI

By TOM HILL
Postmaster,
Bay St. Louis

Last week we discussed first class mail and what the general rules are pertaining to it. This week we will look at the difference between registered and certified mail.

Registry buys security. It is the safest way to send valuables through the mail system. You have the option of purchasing insurance up to stated levels. In any case, the full value of the mailing must be declared whether or not postal insurance is purchased. Only mail prepaid at the First-Class rates may be registered. Registered mail must be securely sealed with mullage or glue. Plain paper or cloth tape may be used, so long as it can absorb a postmark impression and adhere in such a manner as to destroy the envelope or wrapper if removed.

Certified mail service provides a receipt to the sender and a record of delivery at the office of address. No record is kept at the office at which mailed. No insurance coverage is provided. Certification may be used only on first-class (including priority) mail.

On either type of mail you may obtain a return receipt and you may request restricted delivery.

Next week we will discuss a relatively new class of mail, express mail. This is a 'premium' class of mail that many of you may think that you will never use, but you may be pleasantly surprised when you see the advantages and opportunities available by using this service.

SBA funds earmarked for veterans

Representative G. V. Montgomery of Mississippi, chairman of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs, reports the U.S. Small Business Administration has funds available through September for direct loans to credit worthy small businesses.

Montgomery emphasized that a portion of these funds is earmarked for veteran loans with emphasis on disabled and/or Vietnam veterans.

"The Small Business Administration is stressing making 'quality' loans to businesses that can show a reasonable assurance of repayment, but who are unable to obtain term financing locally," Montgomery stated.

If a veteran feels his business qualifies, he is asked to contact the Small Business Administration through his local bank or directly at 322 Federal Building, 100 West Capital Street, Jackson, Mississippi, phone number (601) 960-4378.

According to officials at the SBA, the agency has had a limited amount of direct loan money during the last few years, considering the numerous applications which were submitted. Although funding is now available for direct agency loans, the SBA emphasizes that the funds are "not inexhaustible."

County road sign thefts blamed in two accidents

By JUNE M. HEYDT

The abuse of road signs has become an increasing problem in the county, stated members of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors at a regular meeting conducted Monday morning.

Eugene J. Aronstein, a resident of West Itawamba Road, said he lives on a grass road and is afraid to back out of his driveway because of the traffic and the fact that there are no road signs along the road.

Aronstein brought copies of a case where another county was sued for $350,000 because of an accident that happened on roads with no signs. He said he didn't think that Hancock County officials would want this to happen here.

Bert Courge, District One supervisor, said he keeps putting signs up and people keep stealing them. He gave an example of a woman from Clermont Harbor who was killed and said that just prior to her being hit, the stop sign at the street was stolen.

He gave another example of a sign that had been knocked down by a passing car, a woman came out of her home, laid the sign on the side of the road and went inside to get a shovel. By the time she got back with the shovel to put the sign back, someone had taken off with it.

Courge said he is always putting signs up and just last month purchased 25 stop signs and six caution signs.

A.A. Dolph Kellar, president of the board, asked that someone check into how much extra it would cost to put, 'Property of Hancock County Beat No.,' on the back of all the street signs.

Courge told Aronstein that he would check into the signs on West Itawamba Road and see about getting some put up.

In other business, Barbara Blakely, president of the Water Association of Catahoula Community, asked the board for help in persuading the Farmer's Home Association to give the community money to do a survey on just the area where the community wants to install a water system.

Blakely said that a survey has been done by the National Census Bureau but that the survey included NASA and therefore put the community in a higher per capita income bracket which disqualified them for the money.

The board passed a resolution to help Catahoula get a survey done. The community consists of about 80 homes and is off of Hwy. 43.

Also in other business, the board approved a resolution presented by James C. DeBlanc, director of the Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission, authorizing the firm Advanced Developments, Inc., consulting engineers, to provide the required engineering services and work with Southern Mississippi Planning and Development to prepare an application for a grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The board also approved a resolution from DeBlanc authorizing ADI to provide the required engineering services for repair of taxiway E, runway sealing and apron sealing at Stennis Airport in the amount of $15,260.

The next meeting will be public hearing on Revenue Sharing July 29.

Training trailer available to Mississippi industries

A giant mobile trailer, equipped with $223,000 worth of measuring instruments, is now available to Mississippi industrial firms to train control technicians, says Travis Clift, assistant director of Industrial Services for the State Vocational Technical Education Division.

The trailer containing the instrumentation is 60' long, 12' wide and 8' in height.

It was built by students at Mississippi Gulf Coast Junior College, thereby saving the Vocational Education Division approximately $25,000 over the cost of a commercially built trailer, while providing invaluable hands-on training for the students involved, according to Clift.

Instruments for training technicians in five separate control systems are incorporated into the mobile trailer.

An electrical and pneumatic control and distribution training system comprised of our fitted components; a pressure process training system made up of 10 components; a flow process training system complete with 16 components; a level process training system complete with 12 components and a temperature process training system of 6 components fill all but one section of the trailer reserved for classroom space.

Clift said that the new trailer can be moved to any area of Mississippi where the training of control technicians is required by an industrial company.

According to Jim Miller, director of the Industrial Division, Mississippi Department of Economic Development, the new instrumentation trailer accentuates the voc/tech program by providing access to training skills that will be increasingly important in the coming years.

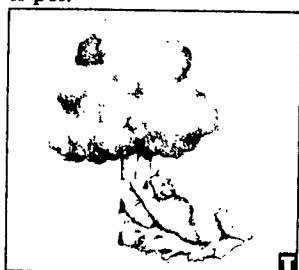

"This is the kind of sophisticated training that more and more industries are looking for states to provide," says Miller.

Twenty-six mobile training trailers are now available for use as on-site classrooms and for teaching such skills as hydraulics/pneumatics, welding, electrical maintenance, electronics, word processing and computerized numerical control machine operation.

A DOG'S LIFE: Stress and Your Dog

Helpful Information From The ALPO Center For Advanced Pet Study

Proper care and conditioning can reduce the level of stress in a dog's life and make for a happier, healthier pet.

When a dog is under stress, internal systems work at an accelerated level to help the body meet the challenge or demand causing the stress. If you want to lighten the burden of stress, learn to think like your dog. Remember, your dog looks to you for leadership, safety, understanding and reassurance.

Make certain the dog lives within a reasonable schedule from the dog's point of view: regular feedings, fresh water and a quiet place to rest. Your dog is an active, participating member of the family. Don't allow other interests to crowd out the dog.

Spend some extra "play" time with your dog regularly. Not just a pat on the head and a quickly spoken "good dog," but some active play, grooming or other activity. Do it daily with attention and affection. Your dog will love it and you.

To feed preventively against the rigors of stress, recent veterinary research has found that a balanced, fortified high protein diet, one with a high amount of meat and meat by-products, is most effective. Protein helps the body to meet the demands of stress.

Quotables by Cuevas

Congratulations are in order for the Bay St. Louis 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars who are the Mississippi state champions.

The local boys managed by Ronnie Artigues and coached by Stacky Strong scored 102 runs in seven games in the district and state tournaments during the last two weeks.

Our baseball programs in Bay St. Louis are probably some of the best in the state when you consider the Babe Ruth 13-year-olds in 1982 were also the state champs with Artigues as manager.

Now we must remember the team this year has a new crop of players, since they were all playing on the Little League teams last year and probably Minor Leagues in previous years.

It took many years of dedication by the baseball leagues, coaches, managers and parents of the so many players involved for the All-Stars to reach the championship of the state.

We wish the Bay St. Louis team well next week when they travel to Sarasota, Fla. for the regional tournament.

We realize not all of the Babe Ruth Players are able to be on the All-Star team, as it is limited to only 15 players, one manager and one coach, yet those not selected have played an important role.

The leagues, players, manager, and coaches not participating in the tournaments are very important and should also be commended. Even though you are not there in person, you are still a part of the team.

One of the problems facing the youngsters is the fact that approximately $4,000 has to be raised for expenses at the Florida tournament. We hope many organizations and individuals will, if possible, make a contribution towards the fund drive.

The outlook for a railroad commuter service between Mobile and New Orleans appears brighter each week.

Many of us remember the commuter trains which ran for nearly 75 years through our county. We rode the trains many times from Waveland to New Orleans and points in between.

Many residents of New Orleans with summer homes in Hancock County used the services in addition to the local people.

Delmar Wilcox, a member of the Mississippi commission on commuter service, was again in Washington last week discussing the matter with Congressional leaders.

It would be to our advantage to take a little time to write such persons as Senators Mark Andrews, Lawton Chiles, John Stennis, Russell B. Long, J. Bennett Johnson, Thad Cochran, Howell Heflin, and Jeremiah Denton, in addition to Congressman Trent Lott expressing thanks for their efforts on the restart of the commuter service.

We know the main objective is for the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition in New Orleans to have commuter service, but it is possible to continue the service, once it gets started.

Many residents of the area commute to New Orleans daily, and traffic is increasing all the time, and a train ride would be a lot more comfortable.

The senators mentioned above are on the Senate Appropriations Committee and have given their stamp of approval, and have written letters to Elizabeth Dole, secretary of transportation, and W. Graham Clayton Jr., president of Amtrak, stating their support.

You may not want to write to all of those mentioned, but it sure would be good to drop a line to Senators Stennis and Cochran in addition to Congressman Lott.

Oh! by the way, we know Wilcox has devoted a tremendous amount of time and effort in addition to money out of his own pocket in promoting the commuter service. It would be a good gesture to offer him appreciation when you see him.

NOSE OF THE CAMEL

"Beware the nose of the camel." That's the advice being offered by the Washington-based Tax Foundation, a private organization trying to keep an eye on federal government taxes and expenditures.

Federally funded programs, the Foundation explains, are like the nose of the camel. Once the nose is in the tent, the rest of the camel soon follows.

And, once a new perhaps relatively modest federal program is launched, you can expect its spending to run amok.

Think about it. The federal food program was created in 1961 with a $13 million annual budget. The program has grown almost 1,000 percent, requiring a $12.5 billion budget in fiscal 1983.

Medicare benefits were first offered in 1967, with a $2.3 billion budget to cover its costs. The year it was begun, experts projected 1984 Medicare expenses of about $8 billion; the proposed budget for Medicare for fiscal 1984 actually is $81 billion.

Result of all this, notes the Foundation, is that the federal debt is growing at the rate of $1,000 per person per year.

The Foundation's advice should be heeded: "Beware the nose of the camel."

GATE DAMAGES CHECKED—Leslie Dedeaux checks the gates at the Hancock County Landfill near the Catahoula Community which were damaged Monday night. Dedeaux, dozer operator at the dump, said he locked the gates when he left at 6 p.m. Monday and found that someone apparently knocked the gates down during the night. Delbert Seay, Hancock County investigator who investigated the incident, arrested a Waveland man Tuesday morning and charged him with malicious mischief in destroying county property. The incident cost the man $146.50 in restitution, plus a fine of $100 and $11 in cost of court when he appeared before Bruce Necaise, Justice Court judge, Wednesday and pled guilty. The dump is open 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Sam Perniciaro, Hancock County supervisor in charge of the dump, said a directive to place a gate at the facility came from Johnny Baggert, chief of the Division of Solid Waste Management of the Mississippi Department of Natural Resources, Bureau of Pollution Control. He urged all citizens to adhere to the schedule at the landfill, as authorities have to enforce the schedule of operations. As the Waveland resident found out, it cost him a sizeable sum for running over the gates when the landfill was closed. The daily garbage dumped has to be covered according to governmental regulations and a fence is soon to be constructed around the entire site. (Staff photo by Ellis Cuevas).

News from the Governor

Drunk drivers in Mississippi will face at least a 90-day license suspension, a fine of no less than $200 and possible jail confinement under the amended Implied Consent Law which became effective July 1.

The new law makes it illegal to drive in the state with a blood alcohol content of .10 or more, and the amendment does not permit a driving under the influence

(DUI) charge to be reduced to a lesser charge.

First offenders' licenses will be suspended for a minimum of 90 days, and the offender will be required to participate in a state driver safety program.

The bill permits a county or circuit court judge to hear a request for a hardship reduction of the license suspension after 45 days. The judge will be permitted to eliminate the suspension, place special restrictions on the DUI offender or reject the hardship plea.

First offenders will be fined $200 to $500, and they may be jailed up to 24 hours.

Second offenders within a five-year time span will be fined $400 to $1,000, have their licenses suspended for two years or at least one year with treatment and be jailed 48 hours or perform 10 days of community service.

Conviction of a third offense within five years will result in a fine of $500 to $1,000, a driver's license suspension for three years or at least one year with treatment and being jailed 30 days to one year.

"Mississippi must get drunk drivers off its highways," said Roy Thigpen, the governor's representative for highway safety and director of the Governor's Office of Criminal Justice Planning. "The message is clear. Don't drink and drive."

"Drunk driving has a role in more than 62 percent of our state's fatal highway traffic accidents. In 1982, at least 365 Mississippians were killed in accidents involving drunk drivers," Thigpen said.

Theater personnel commended on honesty

The Sea Coast Echo

With all the dishonesty in the world, I think this act of honesty should receive recognition.

Tuesday last week I attended the matinee and lost my wallet, which contained enough money to make it worthwhile, credit cards, boat registration, driver's license and many other important documents.

I did not miss it until 4½ hours later and on going back to Cinema IV, I was handed my wallet intact and when I offered to give them a reward, I was told that this was part of the service.

My hat's off to the management and staff of Cinema IV, they are to be congratulated.

I trust you can find the space to publish this letter. Thanks.

No excuse for abandoning pets with advent of county animal shelter

July 13, 1983
Letter to the Editor
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir:

On July 11, 1983 a passenger in a pickup truck driving on Waveland Avenue was observed tossing a live cat into the weeds. The cat disappeared into the woods nearby.

Not only is this cruel and inhumane to any animal, it certainly is not necessary now that Waveland has an animal shelter.

I, for one, would like to see an ordinance passed prohibiting the dumping of animals and a stiff sentence imposed as in littering cases.

P.S. The cat in question was run down the following day and killed. Its remains are still in the street.

Drivers urged to exercise caution in approaching summer bicyclists

7-16-83
Dear Readers of
"The Sea Coast Echo":

Our Grandson on July 1 was on a bicycle on the county road in Diamondhead, riding close to the edge.

Evidently the bike swerved and a car hit the rear wheel of the bike on the right side.

Neighbors, the Diamondhead Rescue Squad, the Hancock County Sheriff's Department, and Mobile Medic all came to his aid.

Each did his/her job to perfection. Tom Wangsong and James Ladner capably handled their jobs.

We understand that a Navy nurse stopped, but no one knows her identity.

We are indeed lucky to live in Hancock County with such kind and helpful citizens.

Stephen's summer has been ruined—he has returned to his home.

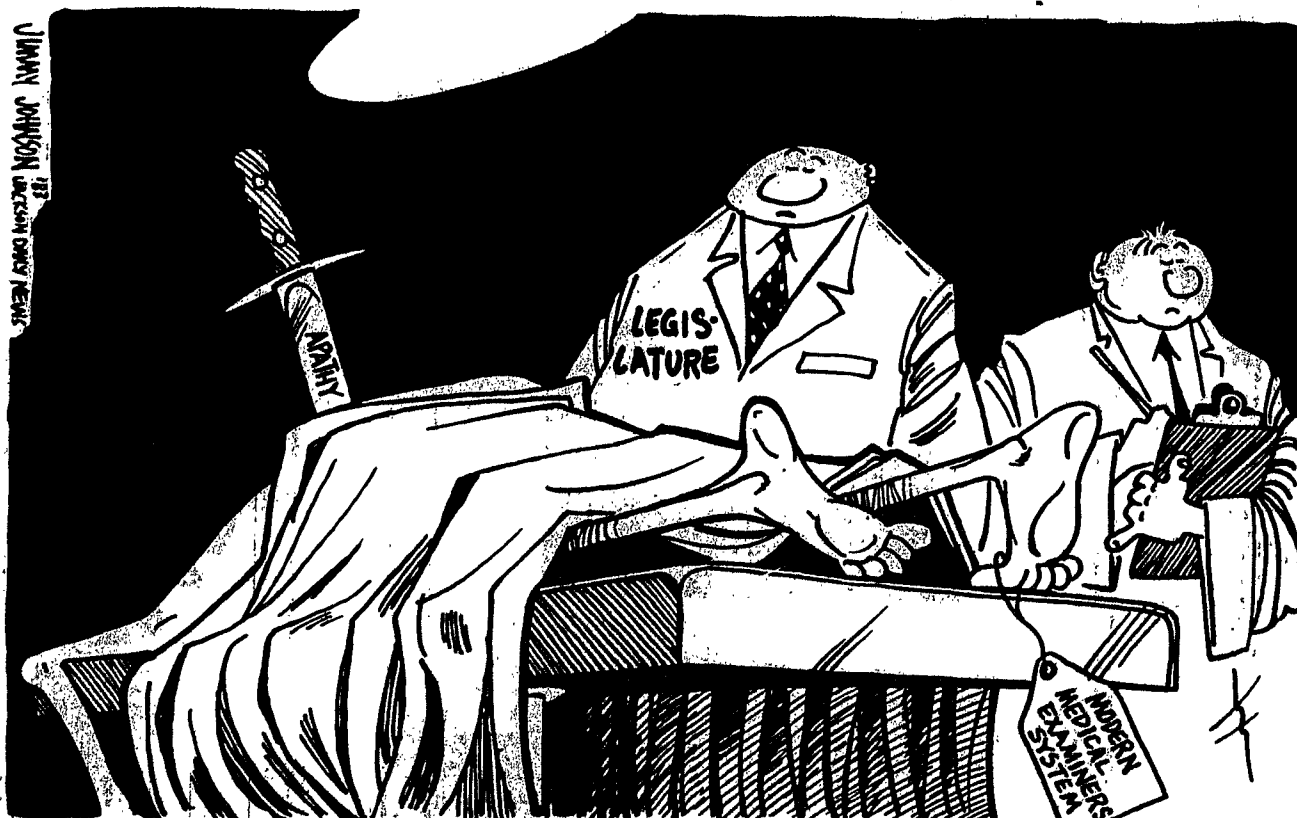

Please do not let any other child have his summer ruined because you are in a hurry.

Very sincerely yours,
Lois and Larry Abrams

Supreme Court removes political accountability from bureaucracy

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article, entitled 'The Supreme Court And The Balkanization of Public Policy' by Bruce Pencek, a national public policy fellow at the Institute for Contemporary Studies in San Francisco is supplied to The Sea Coast Echo by Public Research Syndicated of Claremont, Calif.

Theme: In two recent decisions upholding bureaucratic independence, the Supreme Court has laid the groundwork for the atomization of the American public policymaking structure.

In two decisions recently the Supreme Court gave a clear signal to the federal bureaucracy that it need not worry about interference from elected officials. Bureaucratic agencies will now be relatively free to go in their own directions without politically accountable overseers to impose coordination.

First the Court struck down as unconstitutional the so-called legislative veto, a device by which one or both houses of congress could override the decision of executive or administrative agencies. The decision was widely trumpeted as a tremendous expansion of presidential autonomy.

But the next day the Court exhibited a narrow view of presidential authority when it struck down as arbitrary and capricious the Reagan administration's attempt to rescind a regulation requiring new cars to be equipped with airbags or other passive restraints. The court showed that the Reagan landslide in 1980 will not easily undo the regulatory handiwork of previous administrations.

While the legislative veto was a politically and constitutionally suspect creation, it did offer a relatively precise and practical device for Congress to rein in overzealous regulators. It was a way for the Congress to take back selectively the authority it has been wont to delegate away generously.

Regulations have the power of statutes because Congress passed statutes telling the executive and independent agencies to write rules. When, as it did in the case of airbags, Congress delegates this legislative power to an executive department, the form at least of political accountability is retained because the chief executive is elected. When the delegation is vague and open-ended the only ongoing accountability, absent a provision in the statute for a legislative veto, is through presidential control of the agency. Any delegation involves a great deal of trust; the question is whether it is better to trust the wisdom and judgment of the elected president or of the unelected functionaries.

Taken together the Court's decisions tell the agencies that they are trustworthy enough to be largely on their own as policymakers. To be sure, congressional control can come through the heavyhanded power to threaten errant agencies with budget cuts. The prospect of this retaliation, it is hoped, is to make the bureaucrats sensitive and politically prudent.

The other possible congressional control, of course, is through precise statutes that supercede offensive regulations, and that can survive a presidential veto. In principle that is an effective tactic, but Congress has tried it only in the last few years, with mixed and controverted — and therefore politically difficult — results.

Technically, new presidents can still rescind their predecessors' regulatory exploits, but attempting to do so runs against a judicial tide that demands cumbersome review proceedings that may cost more economically and politically than the rescission is realistically worth.

If the bureaucracy were neutral and apolitical — if the model civil servant cum automaton were real — the Court's twofold signal would present no problem. But it is a truism among students of the federal bureaucracy, liberals and conservatives alike, that the agencies and their staffs are not neutral and apolitical.

The Court may have restricted the Congress and the president, but it did not restrict the power of the agencies' constituencies.

Given their tasks, their interests, their common training and jargons, it is not surprising that regulators and their beneficiaries come to see the world in similar ways and to oppose together supervision or intervention from the outside. These beneficiaries range from interest groups that candidly admit to selfish purposes to those that pretend to represent the public interest (but which in fact never consult the public on issues).

The federal agencies are no more immune to the interest groups in their constituencies than elected officials are immune to the contributions of political action committees (PACs) of other lobbyists. To think otherwise is to ignore years of scholarship on the dynamics of agency "capture," "iron triangles," "issue networks," and the "new class."

The Supreme Court's decisions will simply replace one configuration of interest groups seeking to affect our laws with another configuration that operates outside the political limelight in the agencies and the courts.

This parcelling out of the public authority and public policymaking power has long been going on. Now, by telling the bureaucracy that Congress and the president will not be able effectively to alter the agencies' distribution of goods, the Supreme Court has laid the groundwork for the complete atomization of the American public policymaking structure.

Coast Mental Health Center to lease old Jitney store

By JUNE M. HEYDT

John Patrick Wilz, Community Services coordinator for Gulf Coast Mental Health Center, told the Hancock County Board of Supervisors Monday the center is planning to lease a portion of the old Jitney building on North Second Street in Bay St. Louis.

The facility will house Hancock Industries, a work activities program for handicapped persons, as well as other center programs, according to George Graves, director of Hancock Industries. Graves said, "We employ 30 handicapped adults from Hancock County who are engaged in subcontract work. We do such things as sand utilities, build crab traps and recycle aluminum."

Wilz said before 1964 when the Mental Health Act was passed, mental illness was a hush-hush thing.

Wilz told the board that for every $3.38 in client fees charged, $11.39 in services are delivered.

The federal government in 1964 set up a local Seed Money Act to provide buildings and initial staffing along with consultation and education programs, said Wilz.

Prior to 1964 the rich would go to a private psychiatrist, the poor would go to state institutions, Wilz said, adding the poor who didn't need to be institutionalized were left on their own.

The federal Seed Money Act was initiated to get things started and is being phased out because the government wants the state to take more responsibility.

In Mississippi, the State Department of Mental Health was set up to imple-

The state authorized each county to levy up to two mills to support these centers.

For this local participation, the county officials exercise discretionary managerial power over the program. "We try to make sure the service is available to everyone regardless of whether they can pay."

The center has a responsibility to provide a variety of consulting services to the schools and families of retarded and mentally retarded people.

Also the center has alcohol and drug services. A new halfway house in Gulfport has a rehabilitation program that lasts for six weeks with four more weeks of non-residential counseling. The name of the halfway house is Live Oaks.

Ag Affairs

by Ed Blake

Farm Bureau Federation THE LAST OF HIS BREED

This week the Ag Affairs column visits a very colorful but remote stone quarry in the northeast corner of the state to pay tribute to a little heralded stonemason—perhaps the last of his breed in Mississippi—whose death just over a year ago has left a void in ornamental stonework and in the lives of friends and relatives of this unique artisan.

When this writer first met I.E. (Earl) Gresham a number of years ago it was an exciting, memorable experience. Since then over many years I have returned to drive down the tortuous gravel road that cuts through a hilly terrain of woods, pastures and farms near Tishomingo State Park—finally to reach the shabby old bridge spanning Bear Creek where nearby in the rocky escarpment I usually have found this rare breed of man busily cutting beautiful building stone pieces all by himself.

Earlier this year my last visit turned from excitement to sadness. As I reached the old iron bridge and turned sharply to the left up a tiny one-lane dirt road I came to a halt at a chain stretched across the road between stone formations.

The chain gave me an uneasy feeling that worsened as I parked and walked ahead into the quarry itself to find myself alone. It was quiet. The afternoon sun still bathed the many hued stone facets in rich reflective color—heightening the relief of stone and shadows.

I had found the quarry vacant before, and gone on to locate the stonemason astride his tractor in the fields around his home. But that day—unexplainably, things were different.

As I pondered on his whereabouts I recalled the first time I had seen Gresham at the quarry, wearing his workaday overalls and several days growth of beard. He strided erectly toward me and grinned as we shook hands. Then, unhurriedly as though he was glad to have an interested visitor at the quarry, Gresham patiently answered my multitude of questions about the stone deposit there which is the source of this state's native building stone.

I was greatly interested in obtaining some of the colorful scraps which came close to matching many hues of the rainbow. Also, I wanted to buy some of the cut stone which he produced.

I have since driven a pickup truck to the quarry to obtain mantle cuts which I utilize as nature trail benches in my private arboretum in northwest Hinds County.

On one visit Gresham was cutting sandstone from around a petrified leg he had found gripped timelessly in the stone formation. The leg had bumps on it unlike any tree I had ever seen.

I asked what the tree was. Gresham laid down his tools, mopped his grizzled face, and related that this "moss tree" had lived during the dinosaur period, and as organic matter had survived certain cataclysmic upheavals which had wiped out animate forms of life in its pre-historic era.

He painstakingly chiseled away sandstone slabs encircling about the tree to reveal the ancient tree trunks' details, now silicified into an awesome fossil.

The old tree, I said, would make a notable addition to nature trail sights of my arboretum. But he explained that it already had been committed so the case was closed. Yet he quickly showed and gave me a sizable chunk of the encasing sandstone which was reverse facsimile of a portion of the trunk. Gratefully I loaded it into my truck.

During yet another visit I bought several mantles from him. I asked about a rather large one which was leaning against the quarry wall. Gresham explained that it was a reject due to a taper it had, but I could have it free if I could load it.

He laughed at his joke. I didn't, but asked if he really meant it. He replied that he was serious really, but he put his hand to his back and said with his inimicable smile that he had a back problem and couldn't help me lift it.

He figured the matter over. I didn't. As he watched a little bit unbelieving, I disengaged my tailgate to back up to the seven foot long slab. I couldn't help but notice his expression as it slowly changed from humor to serious regard for what I was doing.

I backed gently and nudged the bottom of the stone backwards. It uprighted, then tilted slightly forward into my truck. I inched forward and the stone trailed until it was balanced. I got out and eased it down, then backed up again against the quarry wall to slide the slab all the way forward. I grinned. Gresham laughed. We clasped hands and I knew I would never forget Earl Gresham.

Since then I bought other loads of beautiful hues of pink, lavender and yellow Tishomingo stone from the quarry owned by J.O. Southward—ever enjoying seeing my old friend again.

My thoughts went back to the chain across the road. With concern I drove back to the bridge, crossed the Bear, and headed northward to Gresham's nearby home.

Two young boys were on the front porch. I got out and asked if they were kin to Mr.

Gresham. One of the boys was his grandson and he told me that his grandfather was now dead.

I was very sad as I drove away that day. I stopped again at the chained up quarry roadway and thought of the many lessons in geology that my friend had taught me. I smiled once amid my grief as I reflected on the one lesson that I had taught him.

Subsequently I telephoned his sister to learn that Earl Gresham had died at age 70 two weeks after becoming ill with a respiratory infection. And that on certain days the chain at the quarry is down yet, as son-in-law Harold Bentley enters the quarry when he is not working as a stone mason himself, to continue cutting the Tishomingo stone from its bedrock—a skill he learned from his aging father-in-law.

Newlyweds rarely aware of partner's spending habits

By Nita Higginbotham
Consumer Specialist
Extension Service

When persons choose to begin a marriage partnership, one of the things the partners quickly learn is the spending habits of their mates.

Spending habits vary by personality, but also by class, region and ethnic background.

Despite the fact that money problems of one sort or another are almost inevitable and might well be the most common source of conflict within marriages, young couples in a recent survey conducted in the Jackson area by the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service Money Management Center, indicated that they were almost completely unaware of potential differences over the use of money.

In a survey of young families with two pay checks, 68 percent of the couples indicated a need to develop a system to combine paychecks and pay bills.

The task of spending income in many families follow one of the following systems:

—Dole system where one of the partners hands out small amounts of money at a time to the other partner and to other family members.

—Family treasurer system where each member has a certain amount of money to spend at will, and is dispensed by one member after paying the bills.

—Division of expenses system where various spending tasks are assigned to either one partner or the other with an appropriate amount allotted to each. Any other spending is undertaken after a joint discussion.

—Joint account system where earnings are placed in a joint account from which either partner can withdraw funds to meet his or her needs.

—Budget system where the couple plan together, in advance, what their expenses will be and establish this as the basis of their spending.

Each system has advantages and disadvantages. The decision of an appropriate system may prove difficult when partners come from homes in which different systems were employed.

The most important knowledge a marriage partner can have is his or her awareness of the other mate's personal spending idiosyncrasies. With understanding plus motivation and financial planning, young marrieds can make up any spending-knowledge deficiencies they face as they build a happy marriage with financial success.

The word "budgeting" has a formidable sound to many, as well as a negative connotation. Budgeting is planning in the form of money flow. Recognizing the problem and understanding the nature of some actions that will improve the financial situation is not sufficient.

The hard part is exercising the self-discipline to plan and then follow the plan. Planning is hard work. Most couples find it more natural first to respond as events occur. Since money is close to the core of existence, emotions must be considered.

the success families experience in personal budgeting is going to be in proportion to the commitment to the idea. A commitment to a successful marriage may mean a commitment to a planned system of budgeting.

ELECT OSCAR PETERSON BOARD OF SUPERVISORS District Three, Hancock County

EXPERIENCED—

My eight years as a member of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, (1972-80), for District Three has given me the knowledge and experience to do the best job for the people of this district.

PERFORMANCE—

In my eight years, some 35 miles of roads were blacktopped in District Three, excluding state-aid. Five concrete bridges constructed, excluding state-aid. I also blacktopped the parking lots at the Hancock County Board of Health office, North Bay Elementary School, and Bay Senior High School. I reconstructed the Dunbar Avenue pier twice after being destroyed by storms, also helped in the reconstruction of the Uman Avenue pier. I was instrumental in the construction of the Community Center at Necaise Crossing, which according to a grant received should be named the Senior Citizens Center, and preliminary work on the ball field was done during my last term as supervisor.

IN THE FUTURE—

I propose to upgrade the recreational facilities at Necaise Crossing with the addition of basketball courts, tennis courts, volleyball, and any other sporting activities, to give our people needed facilities. I will also construct picnic tables and barbecue grills for the senior citizens. I will resurface the many roads deteriorating in District Three as well as blacktop those with heavy traffic. I will also see that the entire county labor docket is published. I am also for the restoring of the seawall tax back to the seawall fund. I think Hancock County should be under the county unit system, especially with the heavy equipment. I have in the past and will continue to support Hancock General Hospital.

When I took office in January 1972, in District Three's account there was only $12.50. When the current supervisor took office in January 1980, there was $126,000 in District Three's account.

Carmichael campaigning for lieutenant governor

Gilbert E. Carmichael, 56, announces his candidacy for lieutenant governor of Mississippi.

Born in Columbia, Miss., Carmichael and his wife, Carolyn, have one son, Scott, 19, a sophomore at Ole Miss.

Carmichael graduated from Texas A&M with a BS degree in business and went to work for The Wall Street Journal.

He entered into private business in 1958, in 1961 moved to Meridian and became a Volkswagen dealer. His business today consists of two Chrysler dealerships and a real estate development company. His total employment is about 60 people and his gross sales are approximately $7 million annually.

A two-time veteran, he served as an enlisted man in U.S. Coast Guard at the end of World War II in the North Atlantic; he served as an officer (LT. JG USCG) in the North Atlantic during the Korean conflict (1951-1952).

He was awarded the Silver Life Saving Medal for rescuing two men in a North Atlantic storm in the winter of 1952.

Carmichael holds memberships in the Public Agenda Foundation and the Visiting Committee to the Harvard-M.I.T. Joint Center on Urban Policy.

He was appointed by President Ford in 1976 to be a commissioner for the National Transportation Policy Study Committee and served as chairman of the committee's only sub-committee on Advanced Technology.

A trustee for the Taft Institute of Government, Carmichael is also chairman of the Meridian Chamber of Commerce's Transportation Committee and vice chairman of the City of Meridian's Planning Commission.

"Carmichael is pushing hard to bring about a new state constitution which will restore the balance of power between the legislative and executive branches of government," said a spokesman.

The spokesman continued, "He thinks the statewide race in 1983 should focus on a debate of issues, not only of jobs, utility bills, and other key factors, but also on the long-range program of reorganization in the state government."

Golf Club Drive speed limit set

The speed limit on Golf Club Drive, a county road, that bisects the Diamondhead Community has been reduced to 30 miles per hour.

New signs warning of children at play, bicycle routes, golf cart crossings, and joggers have been placed in conspicuous spots along the highway.

All persons who use the road will be stopped and ticketed by sheriff's deputies if they fail to obey any of the signs, according to the Diamondhead Security Service.

This action has been necessary as the community has grown and the new bicycle law allows cyclists to ride with traffic.

"The Diamondhead Security and the sheriff's department are working closely together to prevent any accident — please drive slowly and carefully," said a Diamondhead Community Association spokesman.

Rare first editions of books, official military reports and city and artists' guides from the 17th and 18th centuries are among the 1,300 volumes from the personal library of John C. Latham recently donated to The University of Mississippi's John Davis Williams Library.

Latham, who had been a rear admiral in the U.S. Navy and a representative for American Telephone and Telegraph in Paris before his retirement, died recently at the age of 97. His library was donated to the University through bequest.

A graduate of the United States Naval Academy, Latham attended Ole Miss for one year.

Several books in the collection were printed during the 15th century. A modern highlight of the collection is the rare first edition of Gustave Flaubert's "Madame Bovary," first printed in 1857.

Bay Council schedules public zoning hearing

By JUNE M. HEYDT

Bay City Council members scheduled a public hearing for 6 p.m. Aug. 16 on zoning at the request of Clement S. Benvenuti, attorney representing Ms. Anna F. Nichols.

Nichols is opposing a recommendation passed by the Bay St. Louis Planning and Zoning Commission that a zoning amendment proposed by Herbert H. Klein be approved.

Klein is asking that his property be zoned C-3 rather than R-1.

R-1 zoning means that only residential homes may be built on the property. C-3 zoning allows any construction of residential and commercial structures.

Benvenuti stated if a protest against such a change is presented and is signed by the owners of 20 percent or more of the property within a radius of 160 feet it would take a two-thirds vote of all the members of the legislative body of the county.

Nichols says that if her property is zoned C-3 that it will decrease her property value and said that she would be surrounded by commercial property if this zoning change is approved.

The property in question is located off US-90 near Denny's Fried Chicken and Key Properties Realty.

In other business, Ron Murray of Ron Murray Consultants, Inc. asked for and received approval to begin conducting inspections and work write-ups on 10 additional homes in the Housing Rehabilitation Project.

Also in other business, Larry Bennett, mayor of Bay St. Louis, asked that Brown Engineers be authorized to continue work on the corner of Carroll Avenue and Nacaise Street consisting of putting in 800 feet of sewer lines at a cost of $2,840.

Bennett said that the engineers would then be able to mobilize and identify further problems at this location. Approval was granted.

In further business, James Thriffiley, councilman, stated that the minutes that granted Pete Fountain his zoning change from R-3 to C-3 were not signed.

Thriffiley said there were also numerous errors in lot numbers on the resolution which allowed Fountain a C-3 classification.

Thriffiley said that since the minutes are invalid then Fountain's property would revert back to an R-3 classification.

A low bid of $6,754.77 was accepted by the council from Stephenson's Electric for the purchase of nine street lamps to be installed on Main Street.

Eddie Pavre, city clerk, was authorized to advertise for bids for the installation of the street lamps.

Also at the meeting Tuesday night, Mrs. Edna Thornton told the councilmen that her house, located at 528 St. John Street, has been condemned and that she no longer has a place to live.

She (Thornton) asked the council if she could qualify for the housing rehabilitation program.

Ron Murray answered the question and said, they did a study on her home and it couldn't be restored within the $10,000 limit for housing rehabilitation.

Gene Taylor, councilman, asked if there is a provision where $10,000 could be used with an agreement to stop when the funds are used up.

Jody Gex, council attorney said, "Once you contract for a home it has to come up to HUD standards. In this case you're practically talking about new construction."

Taylor asked the council to authorize Ron Murray to seek approval from HUD to see if they could get special permission to do Thornton's house. Council agreed.

The meeting recessed until 7 p.m. July 26.

Change in labeling procedures may bring savings to consumers

By ANN RUSHING
Marketing Specialist
Extension Service

The new method in meat and poultry labeling and approval at the U.S. Department of Agriculture was that nearly all new labels and label changes had to be approved by special reviewers at Washington headquarters.

That was time-consuming and costly, both for food processors and for USDA.

The new method in label approval that became effective June 1, is that USDA inspectors in processing plants are able to approve a substantial number of routine labels. This makes for more efficient plant operation. Dollar savings for consumers also are possible.

This field approval system cuts almost in half the number of labels now approved at Washington headquarters —some 120,000 each year—and reduces the time it takes to approve a single label from three weeks, if done by mail, to less than an hour. That's how long it took field inspectors participating in a pilot study of the new method.

The new system sets up three categories of labels:

Those involving complex or unique problems—such as nutrition labeling or changes in product formulation—that will continue to be handled at headquarters.

Labels which can be approved by a field inspector—including labels for products with only one ingredient and labels for which the Washington staff has already approved a preliminary sketch.

A category requiring no USDA approval by either headquarters or field staff, such as minor changes in label size and product net weight claims.

While most food processors will probably want to use the new procedure, participation will be voluntary. Packers can opt for in-plant approval or apply directly to Washington. Even if they choose to go with in-plant approval they can always appeal a plant inspector's denial to headquarters.

Point of Law

(Prepared by the Mississippi State Bar. Some legal rights may vary from locality to locality. Always consult any attorney when in doubt about your rights.)

Q: My son is constantly leaving things in stores, especially his checkbook if he has written a check to purchase an item. So far either someone has saved it for him or he's discovered his oversight and returned to the store. I keep telling him he needs to be more careful. What can happen if his checkbook is stolen and checks are forged on his account?

A: As the bank's customer, your son has the right to require the bank to recredit his account with the exact amount of the forged checks. This is because a bank generally cannot charge for checks not written by the customer.

However, a customer has a duty to examine his monthly statements and all cancelled checks.

If the customer fails to do this and allows a forged check to pass through, then the bank is not necessarily required to reimburse any future forgeries by that same person. Of course, the best thing to do is what you have suggested to your son—be careful not to lose your checkbook.

Q: My grandchildren live in another state so it's easier for me to send them money in the form of check whenever a birthday or graduation requires a gift. Sending checks like this worries me. What should I do when a check doesn't arrive or the children lose it or it is stolen from them?

A: Missing checks should always be reported to the bank. Bank officials, at your request, will put a stop payment order on the check. It is preferred that the person who made out the check request the stop payment order.

Q: I've hesitated to call a lawyer because I heard they are so expensive. What do lawyers charge?

A: First, you should know that not all lawyers charge the same prices. Ask around. But don't just ask for price. Some attorneys are particularly good at certain areas of the law...maybe your problem falls within this area.

Probably the most basic ingredient in the fee is the amount of time spent on a particular problem. Since a lawyer is rarely confronted with two legal situations which are exactly alike, the fee will

Attorney general candidate opposes nuclear storage

W.O. (Chet) Dillard, 53, announces his candidacy for attorney general.

Dillard, a native Mississippian, is married to the former Marilyn Mikesell and have three children, David, 22; Robert, 17; and Stacy, 16.

He received his BS degree in 1953 from the University of Southern Mississippi. He received his Bachelor of laws degree in 1960 and Juris Doctor degree in 1968 from the University of Mississippi.

Dillard is a trial lawyer in Hinds County. He is a former city prosecutor, district attorney, special chancery judge, commissioner of public safety, and special assistant attorney general.

Dillard takes a hard line stand against the storage of nuclear waste in Mississippi, said a spokesman.

"I feel that if the department of energy were to choose Mississippi as a disposal site, it would be a discouraging factor to those who are thinking of locating families or industries in Mississippi," said Dillard.

"They're talking about storing the nuclear waste down in the salt domes in Richmon. Not only will it have a negative effect on that town, but also to the cities and communities with a 150 to 200 mile radius of Richmon. That includes a great deal of Mississippi," Dillard said.

"I used to be city prosecutor and district attorney in Laurel, and the people over there are very concerned about this. The same goes for the people I've talked to on the coast and Hattiesburg. Everybody is concerned."

Dillard said that locating a nuclear site in Richmon would not be fair to land owners in the Perry County area because it would decrease their present property value. He also said that he felt that each state should dispose of its own nuclear waste. "We don't need nuclear waste from places like Pennsylvania and New York being buried in Mississippi. Let them take care of their own waste."

depend upon favors involved.

If you would like to know more details about lawyers and fees, write the Mississippi State Bar and ask for a free pamphlet on the subject. The address is P.O. Box 2168, Jackson, Ms. 39205.

Q: Aren't there times when non-lawyers can practice law?

A: Sure. Every citizen has the right to represent himself in court. But before one can become a lawyer and represent another (or give legal advice), he or she must meet the standards laid down by the Supreme Court for admission to the Bar. These standards are for the protection of persons seeking a lawyer.

so much by the post office," Gottschalk said.

He added that more postcards are being returned by the Bay post office than from Hancock rural routes delivered from Picaune, Perkinston, Poplarville and Pass Christian post offices.

The election official also fears some voters will go to the wrong polling location, become discouraged and return home.

Tom Hill, Bay St. Louis postmaster, said Tuesday that more cards are being returned from his office because it has the most extensive rural route deliveries.

In addition, he speculated that other post offices based on national regulations may be discarding undeliverable cards.

"We didn't even have to return the cards, but in order to notify him (Gottschalk) I gave the cards back," Hill stated.

The postmaster said most of the Hancock voter roll addresses are prior to 1970 and several 'route adjustments' have taken place not only in Bay St. Louis, but also in those rural routes in Hancock delivered from the other cities.

Hill feels Gottschalk expects the Bay post office to circulate the undeliverable cards among all eight rural route carriers, but stated, "If we've still got the cards, we will try to deliver them."

He said longtime carriers found that many of the undeliverable cards were addressed to residents who had moved or died.

Hill reported that the post office is trying to cooperate with county departments.

The postmaster said he has assisted the County Tax Assessor-Collector's office in finding addresses of property owners and local law enforcement agencies "run us crazy" searching for addresses to serve jury duty summonses.

"Really, the county needs an in-depth voter re-registration," Hill added.

Beefeaters prompted his early military retirement.

To become a Beefeater, Harding and his wife were interviewed by the tower governor, his military record was 'scrutinized' to insure he would be congenial with the tourists, he had to learn the tower's history within six weeks and Harding was required to take the top three Beefeater officers on a guided one-hour tower tour.

"Many volunteer to become a yeoman warder, but few are chosen," he said emphasizing the honor which accompanies the Beefeater position.

The retired military man said he began his yeoman warder training while still in the Army, retired March 6 and began working as a Beefeater the next day.

Regarding the history of the name Beefeater, Harding explained that Henry VIII's guards (yeoman warders) in the 1500's would taste the king's food before he ate to insure it was not poisoned.

Since roast beef was and is a popular English dish enjoyed by Henry, the name Beefeater arose, Harding noted.

The name is also derived from the French word 'buffetier' which means 'waiters at the table,' he further explained.

Although an old brand of English gin is Beefeater, Harding said the London-based company adopted the name in honor of the yeoman and to emphasize the company's synonymy with London.

Harding humorously said that 'out of courtesy' the most popular drink at the yeoman warders' club in the tower is Beefeater's gin.

Harding has been a yeoman warder for a few months, but he is confident it is a 'great' profession because Beefeaters serving for eight to 10 years share his feelings for the job.

He says some three million tourists view the tower annually and he conducts about three tours daily.

Harding enjoys meeting tourists from all over the world, but frankly admitted, "Some people ask some bloody ridiculous questions."

The tower is open to tourists daily except for Good Friday and Christmas.

In the summer, the heavy yeoman warder uniform is hot and Harding said during that time of year he usually has to shower between each tour.

He reported the Beefeaters are not subjected to any rigorous inspections since they all are retired military men who are expected to know how to groom and present themselves.

Beefeaters are not required to grow the traditional full beard and Harding never grew a permanent one in the military, but proudly stroking his whiskers stated, "We're rather encouraged to wear one."

Vera Harding said their lives have not changed significantly with her husband's new job.

Although they live in a modest Tower of London apartment with regulated access, the couple is used to that lifestyle because they have lived around the world in military housing, she reported.

She works as a government secretary.

But Peter Harding reported the major change in his life is that he now meets hundreds more civilians than he ever did in the army and said, "It's great."

He said he must protect his voice to speak loudly enough for everyone of an average 200-person tour group to hear.

He reported the key word a tourist must add for any request of a yeoman warder is 'please.'

SPINNING THE WHEEL—Florence Duffie works on her pottery wheel preparing items to take to the Pass Christian Seafood Festival scheduled for July 29, 30, and 31, from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily. The festival will be on the grounds of the War Memorial Park on East Scenic Drive and Fleitas Avenue. Duffie, who will demonstrate her craft, says, "Working with the clay is the fun part; however, centering it on the wheel is the most important and difficult part. A lot of practice is needed to master centering," said Duffie. Duffie, who gives lessons in pottery, is a member of the Mississippi Gulf Coast Craftman's Guild. (Staff photo by June M. Heydt)

CarQuestions & Answers

Exterior Car Maintenance

An obvious sign of a well-maintained vehicle is a shiny exterior. It sets the mood for the entire car. The key to keeping your car looking good is simple. Just wash and wax frequently. Here are some suggestions from CARQUEST Corporation.

WASHING YOUR CAR
Washing a car is a very simple operation, but, like most things, there is a right way and a wrong way. The best substance for keeping your car clean is water—lots of it. Water will wash away dirt and grime and helps avoid scratching the paint by scrubbing too much. So, when you wash your car, use lots of soap and water and scrub as little as possible. The more you wash your car, the less dirt will accumulate and thus the less scrubbing required. Also, pick a shady spot to wash your car to avoid water spotting, or worse. A water drop in bright sunlight is like a magnifying glass. It can burn a dull spot in the paint's finish. Always wash from the top down, making sure that each section is rinsed thoroughly with a powerful jet of water. This will prevent streaking.

After the car is washed, dry as quickly as possible using a soft terry towel. And don't forget to wipe dry the inside of the doors and door openings.

WAXING
From most car owner's point of view, waxing, like washing, is not a barrel of fun. But if you want your car to stay nice, it has to be done. Car wax leaves a micro-thin layer of protection on the paint that is essential for the life of the finish. There are many waxes and polishes available—and all will get the job done. The choice of liquid, paste or hard wax is strictly a personal matter since the result is the same. The finish that is protected from the sun, dirt, industrial pollution.

To apply the wax, follow the directions on the package making sure the car has been washed and dried first. Apply wax sparingly, and, when dried, buff with a thick nap towel. To avoid swirl marks, the wax should be applied in back and forth motion.

How often should you wax your car? That depends on where you live. The harsher the environment, the more frequently you must wax. One final test—if water easily beads on your car's surface, the wax is still doing its job and there is no need to apply more.

Salting vegetables shortly after cooking them can firm their structure and help them retain color and flavor.

The Great Knot Search

If you're an angler who gets tied up in knots whenever you have to tie one, here's some advice from the experts:

- Wet the line to aid in drawing it up smoothly.
- Use plenty of line so you will be able to tie it properly.
- Keep the twists and spirals uniform so that the finished product is neat.
- Snug all knots up tightly to avoid slippage under pressure. Use an even, easy draw to tighten it, and avoid "popping" the knot.

All it takes to tie good knots is practice. To emphasize the importance of good knot tying Du Pont, the maker of tough "Stren" monofilament, is sponsoring the "Great Knot Search."

Anglers should submit new knots — ones not previously known or written about. A panel of outdoor writers will select the best overall knot and award the winner $2,500.

Just send 10 samples of your knot, along with complete tying instructions to: Great Knot Search, Du Pont "Stren", Room X38879, Wilmington, Delaware 19886. The line you buy is only as good as the knot you tie.

Baby spiders are known as spiderlings.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING RELATIVE TO USE OF GENERAL REVENUE SHARING FUNDS

A public hearing was convened at 10:00 a.m. on Monday, July 18, 1983, in the Board Room at the Hancock County Courthouse relative to the use of an estimated $508,188.00 anticipated to be allocated to Hancock County by the Federal government under Public Law 92-512, State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972 as amended by Public Law 94-488, State and Local Fiscal Assistance Amendment of 1976.

However, in view of the poor turnout of interested Hancock County citizens, and in view of the Board's desire to receive input from organizations and individual citizens regarding use of revenue sharing funds in relation to the county budget, the Board of Supervisors has continued said hearing until 9:30 a.m. Friday, July 29.

All citizens will be afforded the right to submit written and/or oral comments and questions regarding various uses and expenditures of revenue sharing funds in relationship to the county budget for the next fiscal year, beginning October 1, 1983 and ending September 30, 1984.

French introduced okra to the South

By ANN O. RUSHING
Extension Service
Marketing Specialist
French Colonists in New Orleans brought okra—a new vegetable—to this country in the 17th century. Since that time, okra has become quite popular throughout the South. Okra plants are a common sight in home gardens throughout Mississippi. It grows well during the hot summer months and supplies a small green or whitish green vegetable of unique taste and texture for many southern dishes.

The plant is a native of West Africa. It is a close kin to cotton and is widely cultivated in subtropical and tropical countries. The soupy dish known as gumbo is also the Bantu name for okra fruit or pod.

It was so named in England and used frequently in soups because of its thickening properties. Okra is grown in many lands, especially South America and the Southern United States where warm climates nurture its growth. The round brown seeds of fully ripened okra pods can be ground and used as a coffee substitute. Some people claim the beverage is quite pleasant.

Okra is available all year to some degree. Peak season in Mississippi is July and August.

The best quality okra is a small pod which may be green or a whitish green in color. Most of our okra is green. These pods, usually between 2 and 4 inches in length, may be long and thin or short and chunky. The outside of the pod may have ridges or be fairly smooth.

When choosing okra, pick pods that snap easily or puncture on slight pressure. This indicates freshness and tenderness. Since you should not puncture the okra in the market, try instead to avoid limp pods. Okra is a fragile vegetable, so handle it gently on the way home from the store.

If you have't tasted okra before, let your curiosity get the best of you, and try it. Its flavor is unique.

And, if you've tested it once and didn't like it, don't let that stop you either. There are different ways to prepare okra. The taste will usually be similar, but the texture that some folks object to.

Pickled okra is just the opposite in texture. It's crisp and crunch.

So try it several ways before reaching your taste verdict.

When you bring okra home from the store or garden, wash and drain it. Then put it in a plastic bag and refrigerate for no longer than one week. Actually it's best to use it immediately or freeze, can or pickle it for later use.

Boil pods of okra in a small amount of water for about ten minutes and serve as a dish by itself. Season with salt and butter. One pound of okra equals about four servings or perhaps you'd like to try it in a way that's a favorite dish with many southern cooks.

Simply slice the pods, crosswise, dip them in cornmeal and fry in hot fat. This method will prevent the pastiness some people would rather avoid. And, always okra is a "natural" partner for tomatoes.

The old-fashioned Southern custom of boiling whole okra pods on top of butterbeans or field peas has merit, according to nutritionists. The flavorful combination retains the water-soluble vitamins and minerals that would be lost if the excess water were drained from the boiled okra.

In cooking, okra acts as a thickening agent. This helps make it a success in the famous chicken or seafood gumbo of creole cooking. Try it also in soups or pickled for the relish tray.

Small immature pods of okra offer the highest food value. The young pods are a good source of Vitamin C and also contain Vitamin A, Niacin, Calcium and Iron.

As the pods get larger and more mature, Vitamin C content decreases. Vitamin C is also lost when okra is held at room temperature after harvesting. So use it as soon as possible.

Low in calories, ten three-inch pods have only about 30 calories.

VA to construct $11 million Biloxi home

Representative G.V. Montgomery of Mississippi, chairman of the House Committee on Veterans' Affairs reports the Veterans Administration plans to construct a 120-bed nursing home care unit at the VA Medical Center at Biloxi, MS.

The proposed unit, which has an estimated cost of $11,000,000, is included in a five-year medical facility construction plan recently released by the VA. Tentatively scheduled for the 1987 budget, actual construction would get underway in 1988.

"These beds are justified, and I am anxious to see that they are located at Biloxi," said Montgomery who, along with Representative Trent Lott (R-Miss.) and Mr. J. H. Caldwell Jr., the Biloxi VA Medical Center director, worked for the establishment of the nursing home care unit.

The need for a large VA nursing home care unit located on the grounds at Biloxi's VA Medical Center has been documented since 1972. The VA Central Office concurred in this need, and in 1975 construction was started to expand the existing 71-bed nursing home care unit to 142 beds.

However, during construction, a fire destroyed the building, and the existing unit was relocated to the Gulfport Division and reduced to 35 beds because of severely limited space.

These 35 beds, along with 125 community nursing home beds, are presently serving the medical needs of approximately 146,180 veterans residing in southern Mississippi, southern Alabama, north-west Florida and a large area of Louisiana.

The VA, using conservative 1980 projections, has determined a need for 106 VA nursing home beds and 127 community nursing home beds by 1990 to care for a 228% expected increase in veterans over the age of 65.

Chairman Montgomery also announced a $78,800,000 modernization project for the Biloxi facility. The project, slated for the 1984 budget, will include the correction of major fire and safety deficiencies, provisions for patient privacy, air conditioning, and the elimination of barriers to the handicapped.

In addition, approximately $10,000,000 will be used to relocate and build a new laundry facility and power plant. The laundry facility will provide services, not only to the Biloxi VA Medical Center, but to the Jackson and New Orleans centers as well.

Other projects included in the VA overview of facility improvements and construction needs are a $7,200,000 plan to install fire sprinklers and $7,000,000 to construct 70 acute psychiatric beds at the VA Medical Center at Jackson.

The projects are tentatively scheduled for the 1986 and 1987 budgets respectively. The VA submits a five-year construction plan to Congress each year and, according to Chairman Montgomery, "I will be working closely with Representative Wayne Dowdy and Representative Trent Lott to make certain these assessed needs are met."

Making of a Good Photo

You see, you've got to understand something about the way I write this column. Sometimes, I get an idea that seems worth exploring. Then, once the column is written, I go out and round up a suitable photograph to illustrate the principle behind the column.

Sometimes, though, the photo comes first. I'll take a look at something I've shot and an idea for a column will go racing through my head. Of course, then there are weeks like this one. I contact printed-out a roll of film I'd taken at a kids' football game recently. One of the frames I liked best showed a youngster racing his opponents to a touchdown. So far so good.

But what could I write about? What did the photo trigger in me? The advantages of being able to capture fast action? Nah, I've talked about that before.

How to capture a bunch of kids on film without having them look like they're bored to death? Nup, I've written a load about kid photography lately. Depth-of-field? Still-camera panning? Being ready for the shot? Using a "clean" background? No, that's no good, either. All done to death.

Well, I went back and looked again at the photo, trying to decide just what the heck there was that made me like it so much. And you know what I found? Expression.

I know, I know. It sounds goofy. Until you think about it. What I'm talking about is a group portrait, an action candid of some people involved in work or play and relatively unaware of the camera's presence. Do you know how, when you try to get a little kid to pose for the camera, the shot never looks quite right? It has to do with expression, with the look on a person's face, with a look past that face and into a person's very soul. By posing a person, you lose that natural expression that tells the world just what's going on inside.

Do you know how Webster defines the word, expression? Among other things: "Facial aspect or vocal intonation as indicative of feeling." Old Noah hit it right on the head with that one.

Think about the number of portraits you've seen over the years that have left you better off for the experience. Whether paintings or photographs; it's not important.

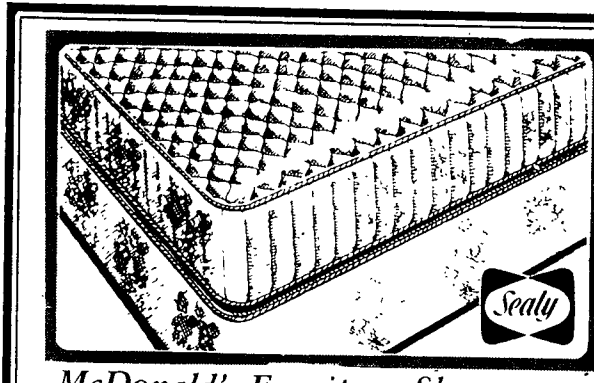

Why is the Mona Lisa so famous? Or Blue Boy? Or Michelangelo's masterpiece on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel? What makes the works of the master photo portraitists masters? Anyone can snap a shutter release. Anyone can capture the physical likeness of a person. But not everyone can capture that "facial aspect indicative of feeling."

It's called expression. When you catch it on film, you do something quite remarkable. You enable the viewer to move from his time and space and enter a different time and space—someone else's body, someone else's being. It's a chance to experience something that you may never have experienced. It's the opportunity to share the joys and sorrows, the wonders and mysteries someone else has known.

Imagine the elation of that young boy racing for the touchdown, the fear as the tacklers raced in to stop him. Think of the adrenaline racing through those young bodies as their muscles strained and their minds struggled to grasp the unknown of the future.

Expression. It's all there in those young faces. Captured perhaps for future generations to experience, as well. Certainly composition, background, depth-of-field, stop-action—they all play a part in producing a good photo. But without expression, all those components are, well, simply blank faces.

Growing Child

LIVING WITH A TWO-YEAR-OLD

The legendary "terrible twos" need not be such a terrible time if parents know how to deal with a child this age. A major cause of contrariness is rapid maturation, according to Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter. Unfortunately, everything about a child is not advancing at the same level. Sometimes he acts like a young toddler, other times he's a two-year-old. But always he reacts with his whole self — a combination of muscle, mind and emotion. Contrariness takes a variety of forms from fretfulness to full-blown temper tantrums. Here are some of the conditions which provoke negative behavior and ways to reduce or eliminate it.

The two-year-old constantly wants to help, a sure sign of extra mess and more clean-ups. In spite of how you may feel, it helps to accept his offer and exploit it.

Assign him simple tasks that he can do with you. If he wants to dust, give him his own dusting mitt. This practice is training for the future when he will enjoy bigger responsibilities such as setting the table and putting objects away.

Many parents complain and wonder why their children don't pick up after themselves. The lack of early experiences like helping in the home may be an answer.

Youngster dwades and you think you will never finish a day in 24 hours. When you press him to hurry or cooperate better, he becomes explosive.

How to cope? There are several approaches: Make it a habit to talk about the next thing that will happen: "Pretty soon we're going to grandmother's. We'll leave in 5 minutes."

Tell him to say goodbye to whatever he's doing or to whomever is present.

Entice him away. "I'm going to show you some magic when we get to the kitchen," and reward him with the demonstration of something simple like a string game.

Offer him a choice. "Do you want to walk or shall I carry you?" Then abide by his decision.

For more information on the physical and social development of children up to the age of six, write to Growing Child, PO Box 620N, Lafayette, IN 47902. When writing, include child's birthdate.

NBC's RENEWAL PLANS NBC should be applauded for standing by three of its quality television shows during hard times and for attempting the controversial "Buffalo Bill."

The three series in particular are: "Hill Street Blues," "Cheers" and "St. Elsewhere," all of which have been renewed for fall. A decision on "Buffalo Bill" is expected in the near future.

NBC's biggest winner is "Hill Street Blues," a tough, tender, absorbing hour of pistol-play and passion.

After a full first season of dwelling at the bottom of the Nielsen ladder, "Hill Street" producers and stars made several trips to the podium to collect numerous Emmys.

This prompted more viewers to tune in to the show during its sophomore year. Again, an armload of statues went to "Hill Street" for its television excellence.

Following this recognition "Hill Street" placed consistently in the Top 20 bracket throughout much of last year. In addition, "Hill Street" became the first series renewed by NBC and series production for the 1983-84 season is now in full swing.

An interesting sidebar to this story is the fact that "Hill Street" producer Steven Bochco has sold another series to NBC called, "Bay City Blues." This "Blues," however, will be a baseball series in the mold of the repertory "Hill Street." We can only hope that it is as good.

"Cheers" was the big surprise of last year. Starring Ted Danson as bar owner Sam Malone and Shelly Long as waitress Diane Chambers, "Cheers" is a breezy half-hour of tart-tongued comedy.

Boasting solid backup from George Wendt as Everyman's Drinker, Norm, and the petite yet vicious Carla, played by Rhea Pearlman, "Cheers" never gives you a moment's rest.

Incidentally, Pearlman is married to Danny DeVito, or Louie of "Taxi" fame, which helps to explain Carla's slightly unsavory attitude.

"Cheers" is a fine show unmatched in its humor by such contemporaries as NBC's "Saturday Night Live," CBS' "The Jeffersons" or HBO's "Not Necessarily the News." If you like to think through your laughs, "Cheers" is just the thing.

"St. Elsewhere" premiered on NBC last October. It was preceded by a heavy promotional blitz that likened it to "Hill Street Blues." And indeed, in style, it does resemble "Hill Street" in many ways; its wandering camera movement, the multitude of players and the overabundant soundtrack.

But, in content, "St. Elsewhere" succeeds on its own. The writing is impeccable and the series characterizations by, just to name a few, Ed Begley Jr., David Morris, David Birney and Ed Flanders, are more feature film material than usual television stock.

"St. Elsewhere" is going to need more time to grow and to find an audience. But, it looks as if NBC is happy with its progress so far and is content to see if it continues.

Finally, this summer NBC premiered the television series "Buffalo Bill" starring everyone's favorite cowboy, Dan Aykroyd. Coleman has been red-hot in the movie business lately. His unscrupulous characters have populated such recent films as "9 to 5," "On Golden Pond," "Tootsie" and "War Games." Series creator Tom Patchett said that he wanted to mold a series around Coleman that would allow him to slither in and out of social situations. And slither he does.

As the arrogant, macho talk show host of Buffalo, N.Y., Bill never thinks of anyone but himself, asks God the question, "I don't know if the phrase 'You owe me one' means anything to you..." or consoles a young woman whose emotionally distraught while looking at his Rolex.

He is unable to say, "I'm sorry," or "I was wrong." And the only reason he eats dinner is because it's an excuse for the festivities that he knows will surely follow.

Still, "Buffalo Bill" hasn't quite hit its stride. The writing is just off-center and the other characters in the series aren't as strong or as complete as Coleman's.

Also, the sheer abrasiveness of Coleman's character is bound to offend many. But, in the final analysis, "Buffalo Bill" is an excellent premise with a fine actor holding the promise of a bright future.

And although it is at the bottom of the heap, NBC gets my vote as network of the year if only for perpetuating and promoting the shows listed above.

STRANGE HEART DEFECTS

Dr. Wm. L. POWELL

Already one million Americans die annually of heart and circulation disease and the number increases yearly. But recently, a team of physicians reported that they have discovered curious defects inside the hearts of some patients who die suddenly. They suspect that long heavy use of various tranquilizers might be a cause of the heart damage. The defects appear to be unique and of the types that might affect the heart's electrical conduction system and hence, its rhythm. In the scientific world, the Chiropractic profession has already attained praise for its work with the nerve electrical system of the body. It's a fact that one of the great benefits of Chiropractic care lies in its ability to protect and help the nerve electrical system and heart functioning at top performance. The preventive benefits of Chiropractic care are unmatched in the healing arts world. For good protection, see your doctor of Chiropractic.

In the summertime I could almost exist on fresh tomatoes, just out of the garden patch, ripened at nature's own pace, and bearing little or no kinship to the sad, mass-produced specimens that greet us in many a market.

And, since I'm a browner than brown thumb gardener, it's my green thumb—and generous—friends who see to it that I can indulge my cravings for tomatoes.

Well...after I ate a couple out of hand, with just a dusting of fresh ground black pepper and a sprinkling of basil, I greedily surveyed my largesse, deciding just how many ways to savor them.

And there are so many ways! I like to marinate sliced tomatoes awhile in olive oil and red wine (half a cup of the oil and a fourth cup of the wine will suffice for about six large, ripe tomatoes) along with sprinkles of basil and chopped green onions. That's a tomato salad the French way, without salad greens, just the full flavor of the tomato.

I like to saute tomato slices in a little butter, turning once, seasoning with salt and pepper and sprinkling with chopped parsley and chopped green onions, then serving atop a slice of toast that's topped in its turn with a slice of ham.

And, if you've never made a fresh tomato sauce for pasta, you've missed a real taste treat. It's also good as a sauce for chicken or seafood, or hard-cooked eggs for that matter.

Tomatoes and okra are made for each other. Here's

OKRA AND TOMATOES

1 lb. sausage of your choice, cooked
2 Tbsp. bacon drippings
1 cup chopped onion (or sliced)

1/8 tsp. thyme
1 bay leaf
1 lb. okra, cut in slices
1 1/2 cups chopped or sliced tomatoes

Seasoning to your taste
Dash of sugar

Saute the sausage with a little water over low heat in a large saucepan, for about 15 minutes, then remove the sausage. Cook the onion and okra in the drippings until the okra stops roping (this takes about 40 minutes or so. If the okra starts to scorch, add a little water).

Return the sausage to the pan, add the thyme and bay leaf, but don't stir. Turn the whole business with a pancake turner every several minutes. Add the tomatoes, sugar and seasonings. Cover and simmer for about 15 minutes.

Capone, Bonnie and Clyde gangsters featured in film

"God's Prison Gang," a newly released film featuring Al Capone's getaway driver, the last member of Bonnie and Clyde's gang and two other notorious criminals who have become Christians will be shown at Church of God on St. John Street on Sunday, July 31.

The showing is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

The film, shot behind the walls of New York's Attica prison, is hosted by Art Linkletter. It tells the story of how the work of International Prison Ministry is accomplishing what more guards, higher prison walls and greater financial expenditures have failed to do—keep released inmates from returning to lives of crime.

Telling their stories in the 44-minute film are George Meyer, Al Capone's favorite driver; Floyd Hamilton, (Public Enemy No. 1) the last of the Bonnie and Clyde Gang; Jerry Graham, the "robber king" of California; and Ted Jefferson, convicted of crimes from drugs and robbery to murder.

Also featured is "Chaplain Ray," whose Dallas-based International Prison Ministry has changed the lives of thousands of inmates over the past 18 years.

The Reverend Charles Hand, pastor of Church of God, said he hopes all citizens concerned about the problem of rising crime will attend the free screening of the film.

MSU offers computer engineering degree

To help meet a growing demand both in Mississippi and the nation, Mississippi State University will begin offering an undergraduate degree program in computer engineering in the fall semester.

Curriculum requirements, formally approved by the Board of Trustees, Institutions of Higher Learning in June, are built around substantial engineering core subjects and required courses in electrical engineering and computer science.

"The program is primarily directed toward the study and design of computer systems and not simply computers alone," said Dr. Brad Carter, computer science department head.

Carter said design of a computer system "must include simultaneously the creation of the desired software and the development of the necessary hardware to accomplish the end result."

The program will be jointly administered by the electrical engineering and computer science departments. The computer engineering degree will be awarded by the College of Engineering.

"Schools throughout the country are establishing similar programs and we are among the first," said Dr. Billie J. Ball, electrical engineering department head. "It is a program whose time has come."

In fact, Ball said, his department has received a "significant" number of inquiries about the program since the College Board gave final approval.

Ball and Carter said a number of MSU students currently studying toward a double major in electrical engineering and computer science might meet the requirements and be able to receive the new degree as early as 1984.

Dr. William A. Hornfeck, associate professor of electrical engineering, will coordinate the program.

"Computer engineering does not replace an existing program at MSU or in Mississippi," Hornfeck said. "It is intended to prepare a graduate for a career as a computer engineer with emphasis on system design, development, and application."

He added: "It also will provide the necessary background for students to enter graduate school in preparation for careers in research or education."

Hornfeck said establishment of a computer engineering program is consistent with a primary state objective of attracting high-technology industry.

Belhaven budget tops $4 million

The Belhaven College Board of Trustees recently adopted an annual operations budget for the 100 year old college exceeding $4 million.

According to Dr. Verne R. Kennedy, president of the college, Belhaven's newly adopted budget contains major increases for scholarships and academic programs. Kennedy said the college was budgeting about $500,000 in scholarship and financial aid next academic year with a 28 percent increase in the amount budgeted for scholarships to students with high academic and leadership backgrounds.

"Although our scholarships are certainly not unlimited, we do not anticipate seeing good students turned away from Belhaven for financial reasons," Kennedy said.

In addition to Belhaven scholarship funds, students at the college are expected to receive about $700,000 in financial aid from government sources. At Belhaven, most government financial aid goes directly to students rather than to the college.

Kennedy also stressed the college's commitment to the quality of its academic programs as reflected in the new budget. Next year's budget more than doubles the college's financial commitment for classroom training material, equipment and books and periodicals for the Warren A. Hood Library and a number of academic programs including Computer Science, Economics and Business, Chemistry, Psychology and Christian Ministries.

Belhaven's president was most pleased over the college's increase in revenues for books and periodicals for the library.

Girl scouts work hard at having fun

Day camp is a learning experience for scouts

YOUNGEST UNIT—These six to eight year olds are planning a cookout with their leaders, Barbara Manix, left, and Connie Burnham. This is the first year a group came that isn't quite old enough to be brownies. They will join the brownies next year said Barbara Jones, director of the camp.

CAMP SITE WATCHERS—Jennifer Matthews, right, and Jennifer Otis, center, sit and talk about scouting with co-director of the girl scout camp, Diane Bennett.

TAGALONGS—Tiffany Roberts and Laurean Broadbent are two toddlers registered in the day care program set up along with the girl scout day camp conducted on the grounds of the community center at Diamondhead. THE FLAG FLIES OVER THE CAMP—Dana Ross, professional scout, sits in the administration tent preparing activities for the Bay-Waveland girl scout camp. The day camp hours are from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and meet everyday for a week. This year's camp is being conducted on the grounds of the community center in Diamondhead. The girls will go horseback riding, swimming, hiking and work on arts and crafts. They are from girl scout and brownie troops all over the Hancock County area.

KNEADING THE CLAY—Rebecca and Nicole Bezou prepare the clay for pottery. The theme for the camp this year is 'Fun in the U.S.A. with each unit of scouts choosing a state to represent.

These third year brownies chose Tennessee and are making pottery like the Chickasaw and Cherokee Indians from Tennessee.

MAKING THEIR OWN SEAT—Desa Rae Ladner sits on the paper mat she made earlier in the day. Leanne Bennett is still putting her's together. The mats are woven out of newspapers and are used to sit on the ground. They are appropriately called situpons.

MAKING PUPPETS—Arizona is the state this group chose to represent. Shannon York and Lauri Gagnon put the finishing touches on the puppets they are making. The puppets are supposed to represent either the animals or the Indians of Arizona.

LEGION AWARD WINNERS—American Legion Award winners at Waveland Elementary School for 1982-83 are Stephanie Roberts, left, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff L. Draves, and Jason Lindsay, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lindsay.

Draft compliance necessary to qualify for student aid

Students who are required to register for the draft must do so before they can receive Title IV student aid funds for the coming fall semester.

Included in the Title IV student aid funds are the Guaranteed Student Loans.

National Direct Student Loans, PELL, College Work Study, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants and State-Student Incentive Grants.

On June 29, the Supreme Court issued a final order on the Selective Service/Student Financial Aid Court Decision which stayed the action taken by a United States District Court Judge in Minnesota. Therefore, based upon this decision, all institutions will now be required to collect from each student a Statement of Draft Registration Compliance prior to disbursing any Federal Student Aid. The Statement is included in the loan application or can be signed on the day of registration.

In addition to the change requiring draft registration, the Department of Education is requiring that all universities tighten their academic regulations for students receiving financial aid. Beginning with the fall term students must:

1. Meet the academic standards (G.P.A.) as outlined on page 58 of the 1983-84 University Bulletin.
2. Pass at least six hours each term to continue receiving aid the following term.
3. Complete degree requirements within a time frame. Undergraduate students must normally complete their undergraduate work by the time they have attempted 170 hours. Graduate students must normally complete their masters requirements before they have passed 72 graduate hours and must complete doctoral requirements before they have passed 150 total graduate hours. Exceptions may be made in certain fields of study which require additional hours.

William Fron, University of Southern Mississippi Director of Financial Aid, said that the new draft regulations should not cause any decrease in fall enrollment since the students will not have to present a letter of proof stating they have registered for the draft.

"The new grade requirements could affect the spring enrollment," said Fron, "but only if the students do not make their required grades."

Personalized scholarship availability offered

Students in need of financial aid for next fall should begin now to apply for the thousands of scholarships being offered by private foundations, trade and civic groups and other sources.

There are over 25,000 different scholarships available, according to the director of The Scholarship Bank. Scholarships are available from tax exempt foundations that are required by law to make a certain amount of financial aid available each year in order to maintain their tax-exempt status.

The Scholarship Bank matches students with available aid and sends the student a print-out of the private financial aid sources that appear to be most promising for that student.

Each student may receive up to 50 sources of aid. Most scholarships have a value of approximately $500, and many are renewable annually. Financial need is only one of several criteria to receive aid. According to The Scholarship Bank, geographic preference, military service of the student or his parent, major in college, academic standing, ethnic heritage, occupational goal, employer, union membership, and whether the student is interested in work-study, loans, essay contests and the like all determine eligibility for aid.

Students wishing to receive a print-out should send a stamped, business-size self-addressed envelope to The Scholarship Bank, 10100 Santa Monica Blvd., No. 2600 Dept. A, Los Angeles, CA 90067.

A questionnaire for the student to fill out describing him/herself will be sent back to the student and the applicant then can receive the personalized information.

USM elementary education majors to register Aug. 1

Monday, Aug. 1, has been set aside for the advisement and issuing of registration packets for University of Southern Mississippi undergraduate elementary teacher education majors for the fall semester.

Packets may be picked up from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on this day only. Students' advisors will be available at this time.

Packets not picked up on this date will not be available to undergraduates until Aug. 29, the first day of registration. Students who secure their packets on Aug. 1 will be able to have their I.D. photo made prior to registration. Students in "screening" will not be able to pick up their packets until the first day of registration.

All teacher education majors are required to take the COMP Test and may pick up applications from the Student Teaching Office. Also, the Math Placement Test will be given on Wednesday, Aug. 21, after 2 p.m.

For more information, contact Dr. Bobby D. Moore, Coordinator of Elementary Education, in the Education and Psychology building Room 108.

Southern Exposure auditions slated

Tim Breland, director of Southern Exposure, has announced Sept. 5-6, as audition dates for the World's Fair-bound USM song and dance road show.

Auditions will be held in Bennett Auditorium from 7-10 p.m. An accompanist will be provided, but auditioners may bring their own.

According to Breland, those auditioning should prepare a ballad and an up-tempo number for the auditions.

Musicians interested in playing in the Southern Exposure band should contact Breland during the audition hours for a private appointment.

The auditions are open and any serious USM student will be considered.

For additional information on the 1983-84 edition of Southern Exposure, contact Tim Breland at (601) 266-4491 or 264-4502.

Logic a hinderance to learning

Are students being hindered in school when they are asked to think in a logical manner?

That could be the case, according to one of the nation's leading experts on the human brain, writing in a recent issue of the Bulletin, a monthly journal published by the National Association of Secondary School Principals (NASSP).

"A great many accounts show that scientific, inventive, and engineering solutions often come about in the nonlogical fashion," wrote

Leslie A. Hart, author of the book, "How the Brain Works." He believes that forcing students to think in a logical, linear method may be hindering their learning.

"Today it is easier to see that logical approaches seriously interfere with schools' effort to bring about learning," he reported.

"Having learned something in random style, such as how to drive a car, manage personal finances, or write an essay, we are likely to try to teach it in an order that we can claim is logical."

He also pointed out that schools may require a "logical lesson plan," and cautioned that adults teach in just the opposite fashion of how they learned.

Hart fears that when students are given a problem in school it is unrealistic to true life. The basic information is neatly provided, there is normally only one right answer, and a logical solution is most often sought.

"One does not try to teach the heart how to pump blood, the gut how to digest food, or the brain to think," Hart wrote.

"The brain developed speech, the family, use of fire, clothing, shelter, dance, art, religion, hunting, and a vast amount of technology many tens of thousands of years before anybody heard of logic or formal education."

He called upon teachers and administrators to "approach the magnificent brain humbly." They should design educational settings which are "brain-compatible, not brain-antagonistic."

Since the human brain builds on its own experience, Hart proposed that students be given as many sources of experience as feasible which are relevant and useful to them.

He suggested that a group could tackle a real problem, be given time to inspect it, discuss it, and then work out a solution. Examples might include designing a water table for experiments, a cage for animals, a format for a newsletter, or a computer program.

"When students object to doing stupid problems, they may have a point," Hart indicated. "The human brain is geared to meaningful matters and to reject and shut out that large portion of input that doesn't help 'make sense of the world.'"

He recommended that students be encouraged to examine all information, to deliberately consider a wide variety of approaches to avoid a too early fixation on any one, and to study any complex problem thoroughly and give the brain an opportunity to come up with a solution.

"If we don't try to 'run' the brain, this mighty instrument, more powerful than 100 large computers, will likely oblige us with excellent performance, making the best use of whatever experiences it has stored," he wrote.

USM enrollment sets record

The University of Southern Mississippi has set a record in enrollment for the summer term of 1983.

According to Danny Montgomery, USM registrar, 5,796 students have registered for summer courses on the Hattiesburg campus. That figure compares with last summer's registration of 5,439 and reflects a 6.5 percent increase in students.

A report prepared for the Board of Trustees of Institutions of Higher Learning shows 3,326 women and 2,470 men signed up for classes. New students numbers show an increase especially at the freshman and sophomore levels.

Summer Mini Quarter programs are off to a good start with the first session reporting over 400 participants. Mini Quarter has been a barometer for estimating fall enrollments and this summer's program has USM officials optimistic about the Aug. 28, 29 and 30 fall registration dates.

State cites Reading Improvement Program as model for entire nation

Mississippi is attacking a national problem. By placing an assistant teacher in every first, second and third-grade classroom, Mississippi is building a strong foundation in the basic skills.

The Mississippi Reading Improvement Program is a model for the entire nation, the State Department of Education's Division of Instruction reports.

Both Mississippi and North Carolina will have both a first-grade teacher and a program assistant teachers in the primary grades. This places the state in the top 10 in the nation in terms of commitment to early childhood education.

A cornerstone of the Education Reform Act of 1982, Mississippi's Reading Improvement Program is the implementation of the act to be implemented throughout the state. It is one step toward improving the quality of education in grades 1 through 3.

A recently published book, "Don't Blame The Kids: A Guide With America's Schools" by New York Times education correspondent, Jane Mayeroff, assistant teachers are recommended as a way to provide teachers throughout the country some help in teaching the basics.

He concludes, "What has occurred is not a miracle, but a case of adding one more competent adult to the classroom so that more time could be devoted to the needs of each pupil."

Mississippi's Program
Students "learn to read in grades one through three and then they read to learn."

Mississippi is investing additional resources at the earliest level of public education to help children learn to read.

Mississippi's Reading Improvement Program is:

—A staffing pattern that places assistant teachers under the direction of classroom teachers.

—A basic skills emphasis program that helps ensure student mastery of skills by:

1. Reducing the pupil/teacher ratio;
2. Promoting individual and small group instruction; and
3. Increasing student time spent on learning tasks.

—An anti-remedial program. Unlike most federal programs, assistant teachers work within the classroom all day and with all students to reinforce skills and lessons taught by the teacher and to supplement basal instruction.

Keys to Success
Local school leadership, capable assistants and proper training are prerequisites for the successful implementation of Mississippi's Reading Improvement Program.

—Assistant teachers must be involved in actual instruction.

—Tupelo first grade reading scores have climbed 19 percentile points from the 67th percentile to the 86th percentile since 1980.

—The time students spend on learning tasks has been identified as the primary reason for higher achievement in this program. Lee County students have been measured "on task" 82 percent of the time, compared to a national average of 70 percent.

What Others Think
Here is what Mississippi educators and other leaders think about Mississippi's solution to this national problem.

"An assistant teacher is exactly what I need in the first grade. It is impossible for me to adequately teach all 27 students by myself." —a Prentiss County first-grade teacher.

"I had decided to quit teaching first grade after eleven years until I heard we were getting assistants. I am planning to give it another try now." —a Lafayette County first-grade teacher.

"There is no telling what we could accomplish with the help of assistant teachers." —a Brandon School administrator.

"Assistant teachers are available in every community. My children got a good start in school thanks to their teachers and assistants." —a Lee County parent.

"...employment of full-time aides in first grades nearly doubled the number of children who learned to read over the number in classrooms with part-time or no teachers aids." —a university professor.

"We believe the use of teacher aides hold greater promise of improving later school achievement than any other single program we could recommend at this time." —a Report to the Governor on Education, State Research Associates.

"To build a house, you must first build a strong foundation. If a child doesn't learn to read and compute at the beginning of his education, he is handicapped forever. Remember, these youngsters who are learning to read today are going to be the people hired by our banks, our industries and our businesses 10 years from now." —George McLean, Northeast Mississippi Daily Journal.

Southern's Arena Theater continues season Tuesday

The Ranevskayas nostalgic attachments to the cherry orchard on the family estate is told in Chekhov's "The Cherry Orchard" to be presented at the University of Southern Mississippi beginning July 26 in the Southern Arena Theatre.

The heavily mortgaged estate of the aristocratic family is being sold to the boorish son of a peasant, Lopakhin (Mike Hill) who has made his money in industry.

In this turn of the century play, even though each person realizes that the estate must be sold, none can bear to sell the orchard, which symbolizes a lost past to each one.

To the freed serf, Firs (Scott War) it represents a time when love and loyalty were more important than material success. To Madam Ranevskaya (Dayna Anderson) the orchard symbolizes the security she had with her husband and son when she was younger.

To Gayeff, her brother, (Phil Simon) it recalls a time when he could be a carefree gentleman farmer concerned more with billiards than banking.

Although each character can see the blindness and impracticality of the others in facing the new Russian world, they all retreat into their daydreams when threatened.

"What makes 'The Cherry Orchard' still a classic today is Chekhov's extra ordinary knack for breathing warm life into a set of characters whatever their pursuits," said director Larry Mullican.

"The Cherry Orchard" will be presented again on July 29, Aug. 3, 6, and 11 at 8 p.m. A special matinee performance will be at 2 p.m. Aug. 7.

The Southern Arena Theatre box office opens July 13 and will be open Monday through Friday thereafter at 11:30-1:30 p.m. and from 4-5:30 p.m. The box office will also open at 7:15 p.m. before each performance.

Season tickets for all three plays are $9 for the general public and $6 for members of the USM community and senior citizens. Tickets for individual plays are $2.50 and $3.50 respectively. Call 286-4099.

Hancock Reservation nationally accredited

The New Orleans Area Council's Salmen Scout Reservation near Sellers in Hancock County received an "A" nationally accredited plaque and rating for 1983.

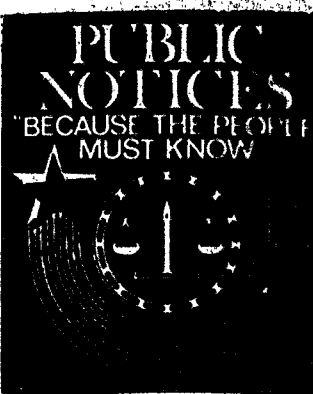

Regional representatives made an objective review of the camp's operation and facilities as well as a complete appraisal of the staff and program.

Mandatory standards included items as tested drinking water, milk supply, refrigeration, physical exams, medical inspections, health log, latrines, waste disposal, state and local permits, licenses and sanitation inspections.

This camp has 1,400 acres of rolling hills and pine trees. Scouts engage in wilderness camping and sleep in 2-man tents.

"Men do not suspect faults which they do not commit." —Samuel Johnson

Students grades 9-12 and living within the school district will register at the Bay Senior High School on Blue Meadow Road.

Superintendent J. D. McCullough stated that first grade students must be accompanied by their parents and bring their birth certificates proving that they will be six years old as of Sept. 1, 1983.

All students, 1-12 grades must have the following immunization shots for the 1983-84 school term according to Senate Bill No. 2650 of the Regular Session of 1978 Legislature before they can officially enroll in school: diptheria, tetanus, whooping cough, polio, measles, rubella. Parents must secure the special school certificates from the local health department or a private physician. All cafeteria workers must have their health cards updated, McCullough added.

All schools will begin classes on Monday, Aug. 15 with the school day at Waveland Elementary beginning at 8:15 a.m. and ending at 2:35 p.m.

The elementary school at North Bay will begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 2:50 p.m.

The Junior High and the Senior High Schools will begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 3:30 p.m. All cafeterias will be in operation. Student lunches, grades 1-12 will be $1 each and faculty and staff $1.25 each.

The first two weeks of school will be on a sixty percent school day schedule — elementary school at Waveland beginning at 8:15 a.m. and ending at 12:35 p.m., North Bay Elementary beginning at 8:30 a.m. and ending at 1 p.m. Both Junior and Senior High will begin at 8:30 a.m. and end at 1:30 p.m. All student lunches will be served each day.

Faculty workshop meetings will be held on Monday, Aug. 15 through Friday, Aug. 19 from 2 p.m. until 3:40 p.m. each day.

A joint meeting of all school personnel will be held on Monday, Aug. 15 at 2 p.m. in the Senior High School Library located on Blue Meadow Road.

The Bay-Waveland Separate School District embraces an area of approximately 27 square miles and serves a population of approximately 13,000 people.

The student population of the district for the 1982-83 school term was 2,000 and is served by two elementary schools, grades 1-5; one junior high school, grades 6-8; and one high school, grades 9-12.

The district is served by a five-member board of trustees and is accredited by the State Accrediting Commission and the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

The school district employs 113 full time classroom teachers and administrative staff.

The teacher-pupil ratio is 1-20. The district employs two full-time guidance counselors, 13 special education instructors, two speech pathologists, one Chapter I instructional supervisor, one athletic director, one psychometrist, one special education supervisor and one reading supervisor.

In addition the district employs five teacher's aides in special education; one teacher and 16 teacher's aides under Chapter I to work with students who have difficulty in reading and mathematics.

For the first time computer assisted instruction will be provided for the Chapter I students.

Six assistant teachers will work with all first grade teachers.

The high school offers 58 Carnegie units in its curriculum.

Seventeen units (16 academic and one non-academic) are required for graduation.

Approximately 56% of the class of 1982-83 are enrolled in college.

The high school, in cooperation with the local junior college, offers vocational-technical training in five areas to those students desiring vocational careers.

The high school and junior high school, offer courses for remedial, average and advanced students.

The Waveland and North Bay Elementary Schools will have a class for gifted students, grades 1-5 located at Waveland Elementary.

The district operates 17 school buses and provides transportation for students living one mile or more from the school they attend.

The Bay-Waveland Municipal Separate School District will spend approximately $1,650 per student in the ADA for the 1983-84 school year, not including capital outlay.

The revenue will come from federal, state and local sources.

UNO enhances music, language programs

Two new master's degree programs are being offered by the University of New Orleans beginning this fall, according to UNO Acting Chancellor Cooper R. Mackin.

The programs are a master of music degree with a concentration in performance and a master of arts degree in romance languages with a French concentration.

Explaining the programs, which were recently approved by the Louisiana Board of Regents, Dr. Mackin says that "the remarkable amount of musical activity" in the New Orleans area and "the ongoing commitment by Louisiana to French as a second language" point to the importance of these programs.

The graduate program in French is unique because it will be the first in Louisiana and neighboring states permitting concentration in language, culture, and civilization, with advanced training in the commercial aspects of business French.

Other master's programs in French in this area are primarily oriented toward and structured around studies in literature, says Dr. Mackin.

"The state and the country's need for persons professionally and academically competent in foreign languages in general, and in French in particular, has increased rapidly over the past few decades, along with the 'back-to-basics' philosophy at all levels of the educational system," adds Dr. Mackin.

Dr. Mackin says that the city's diverse musical activities — the symphony, opera, ballet and many popular performing groups — require the services of musicians trained beyond the undergraduate level and of a substantial body of skilled music teachers at the preparatory level, both within the several school systems and private teaching area.

"There is no similar (music) program in any public institution within reasonable commuting distance from New Orleans to meet these needs," he says.

Students interested in either of the new programs should contact UNO's department of music, 286-6381 or the foreign languages department, 286-6657.
